

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

How To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment will settle to the bottom, indicating an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your glass, it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to urinate, or pain in the back is also evidence of kidney trouble; a convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

What Constitutes Charm in Women.

(Richmond News-Leader.)

TAKE a bird's-eye view of your friends and you will find that the woman among them who is least self-conscious is the woman who possesses most charm. Charm is not dependent upon youth or age, beauty or intellect or fine clothes. It is equally apparent at 18, 28 or 38. It smiles behind freckles quite as often as behind alabaster skin, and peeps from a sun-bonnet as readily as from a Virot hat. It frequently fights shy of intellectuality. It is innate, yet it may be acquired to a marked degree.

The girl who lacks it may grow into the woman who possesses it, for though it is known by a variety of names as personality, magnetism, etc., in reality it is merely the attitude of one's mind.

The growing girl is apt to be painfully conscious of herself. She is constantly wondering what people are thinking of her, and saying of her, with the consequence that she is tactless and awkward.

If her hands are beautiful, she invents innumerable ways of keeping them before the public gaze; if they are ugly, she seems constantly repressing a desire to sit on them. If her profile is her strong point she will never favor you as a square look in the eyes, lest you become disillusioned with her full face. In other words, she either flaunts her prettiness before you or makes such awkward attempts to conceal her homely traits that they cry aloud for your attention.

Such self-preoccupation is not conducive to charm. It is only when she is old enough to become accustomed to herself, to acquire a little confidence, a little dignity and repose of manner that one has a first glimpse of that elusive, indefinable quality.

Then all parts of her body work in unison under the direction of her mind and her self-consciousness drops from her as a garment and charm stands self-revealed.

It is in those moments when a woman is most indifferent, most independent, most herself that she is most attractive. It is when she is doing something and doing it well, putting all her heart into it, instead of wearing it on her sleeve, that she compels admiration.

Mlle. de Lespinasse, the most charming woman of her time, said: "I am loved because others believe and see that they are making an effect on me; and not because of the effect I make on them."

The secret of her great success in social life was that she felt the minds of others and made them shine, utterly forgetting herself.

She was not beautiful, and, at the time of her greatest popularity, when she gathered all intellectual Paris about her in her salon, she was nearing middle-age; but her soul was always young, her enthusiasms fresh, and one of her admirers says of her: "I have never known a woman who had more natural wit, less desire to show it, and more talent in showing to advantage that of others."

A woman is usually most attractive when she is alone. Directly a man appears and she throws aside her work to make herself attractive she loses by the effort.

The woman in love is always full of charm, for she is then doing the thing that she knows best how to do, and doing it with all her might.

Marvelous Escape from Death!

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Does a Wondrous Work for a Lady Who Was Almost Crased with Pain and Suffering.

It is well known that terrible rheumatism, sciatica, and neuralgia, cause more helplessness, acute suffering, and agony, than any of the other diseases that afflict humanity. The great medicinal virtue of Paine's Celery Compound makes it the only trustworthy specific for the cure of all forms of rheumatism and neuralgia. Thousands of strong testimonial letters from the most prominent people of the land, prove that Paine's Celery Compound has banished these terrible fatal troubles which all other treatment has failed. Mrs. Margaret Bethel, of Brainerd, Minn., after thirty years of agonizing tortures had a desire to end her life, if it was the will of Heaven; she almost prayed for the time to lay it down. Heaven-directed, she made use of Paine's Celery Compound, and is enjoying true life once more. She says:—

"For thirty years I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia in the head, and also with rheumatism in the whole body. I began taking Paine's Celery Compound and soon found it was much better. Before taking the Compound, my life was such a burden that I almost prayed to lay it down. I was bedfast every two weeks with horrible pain in the head, back, and neck, until I was almost crazed. I am able to do harder work and more of it today than for twenty-five years. I am really enjoying life again, thanks to Paine's Celery Compound. I am satisfied that my life has been prolonged many years by its use."

Growing Butter Beans.

Of all the vegetables grown in the garden, this is one of the best and one which is often neglected. H. E. Riehl, in Colman's Rural World, tells how he trains his vines so that no poles are needed. It is the lack of poles which prevents the growing of lima beans oftentimes. He says:

"I grow butter beans on a trellis, which is cheaper and much more satisfactory than to have a pole for each hill. A substantial post is set at the end of each row and well anchored, lighter posts or stakes are set between at intervals of ten or fifteen feet. Two wires are stretched tightly, one ten inches from the ground and the other just as high as one can conveniently reach. Jute twine is then stretched from top to bottom wire, eight inches apart. The plants are set sixteen inches apart, giving two strings to the vine. A third wire may be stretched midway between those securing the twine, which will be of advantage in case there is heavy growth. The advantages of this method are that the vines take hold of the strings and climb with very little assistance, without the coaking that is necessary when poles are used, and the beans being spread out all along the row, hanging there in plain sight, affords a great convenience in gathering. When crop is over the trellis is easily cleaned by cutting vines at the ground and pulling down vines, twine and all. Loosen the wire, excepting at one end of post, roll each one up separately, tying the roll to prevent tangling, and hang over post to which it is attached. Remove stakes between and you are ready for the spreading of manure and the plow. In spring, when soil is nicely prepared, set stakes, stretch out the wire, run the twine, and you are ready to plant again. I always start my plants in hotbeds, usually in three-inch pots. This may seem like a big job when grown in quantity, which it is, but I find it pays well. Not only is it a great gain in earliness, but it insures a good stand. I have rows eight feet apart, and between rows I plant a row of early peas or cabbage; anything that will mature about the time the beans get good headway. Of course, these between crops must be planted some time before the beans are ready to go out. Last year I sold a good many beans at thirty cents per quart, while my neighbors' vines were just beginning to climb the poles, which is something in favor of transplanting."

Some Whoppers.
Some newspaper men are terrible prevaricators. One of them wrote about a cyclone, saying that it turned a well worn side up in the State of Mississippi, turned a well upside down in Wisconsin, moved a township line in Nebraska, blew all of the staves out of a whiskey barrel in Iowa and left nothing but the bung hole, changed the day of the week in Ohio, killed an honest Indian agent in the West, blew the hair off a bald-headed man in Texas, killed a faithful lawyer in Illinois, blew a mortgage off a farm in Kansas, scared a red-haired woman in Michigan, blew the cracks out of a fence in Dakota, and took all the wind out of a politician in Missouri.

A HAUNTED HOUSE.

How This Particular One Got Its Reputation.

Washington Star: "It is curious that an appetite people have for things smacking of the mysterious and gruesome," said a Washington man to a Star reporter the other day. "There is a whole lot of superstition in this world; even among educated people, and it is amazing how readily people accept unfounded reports of the mysterious sort, as though they were determined facts."

"An illustration of this tendency to believe remarkable tales came to my notice recently with regard to a certain house in Washington which was said to be haunted," continued The Star's informant. "Two young men were strolling along the street one evening some time ago with two young ladies. The conversation had turned upon haunted houses, and several tales of frightful mystery had been related. Before the party of four reached the homes of the young ladies they passed a small house which was almost obscured by vines. It was a rather gloomy looking place, especially at night, and was inhabited by an old couple who lived quietly and peacefully, unmindful of the turmoil of the outside world."

"One of the young men noticed the house and jokingly remarked that it was said to be haunted. The other young man took up the story and related a few imaginary accidents which had occurred there in days gone by. The young ladies evidently were impressed, and not long afterward other residents of the neighborhood knew the story concocted by the young man with the elastic imagination. At first, according to the tale, only one person had been killed in the house in a mysterious manner, but in a few weeks several men, women and children had met death there in the most awespiring manner. Strange noises, shrieks and pleading cries were frequently heard in the little vine-covered cottage during the 'spooky' hours of the night, and up to a few days ago the story of the haunted house, which had been first started in a spirit of fun and without any foundation of truth whatever, was a horrible tale, reeking with bloody and gruesome mysteries. It came back to the young men a few days ago, and they laughed heartily over the affair, and then told how the story was started. But it is likely that the residents of the neighborhood who have heard the story will always be inclined to look askance at the modest little dwelling, and will always associate it with the other buildings in Washington which are supposed to be haunted."

Diversified Crops.

No other government in the world attempts to give its people such frequent and detailed information about crops as the United States furnishes to the farmers of the country in its monthly crop reports; nor is there any other country which could furnish reports so diversified and, from the point of view of all the people, so helpful.

Size is in itself often, perhaps usually, an element of strength. This is true as of a country as of an individual; but the strength of the United States lies more in differences of soil and variety of climate than in mere extent of territory.

These differences mean diversified products—a fact which the crop reports bring out at a glance—and therefore reduced liability of widespread suffering through local crop failures. If there is a country on the face of the earth where a famine is absolutely impossible, this is it. In ordinary times we raise not merely the food we ourselves need, but also a large share of what Europe eats. Our ration is not confined to one or two things, but consists of wheat, both winter and spring; corn, oats, rye, barley, rice, potatoes, many kinds of fruits; beef, mutton, poultry, pork, milk, butter and eggs.

Meteorological conditions which should blight or destroy more than a small part of this food supply are almost inconceivable. At least they are unheard of. And there remain those other great crops, cotton and hay, which, though they do not in themselves furnish food to man, yet indirectly put food into the mouths of millions.

Sections may suffer as, this summer, New England has suffered from drought and some parts of the West from flood; but these are, after all, little patches on the great agricultural map. The country as a whole moves prosperously on from year to year.

A Meteoric Phenomenon.

Waynesville Courier.

On top of Rich Mountain, about three miles from the post office of that name, near the line between Caney Fork and Canada townships in Jackson county, occurred Thursday, June 11, 1903, one of the starkest phenomena ever witnessed in that section or perhaps any other section of this country.

Rich Mountain is a pretty high mountain and little farms are scattered about over its surface, some of them extending almost to the top. On the day mentioned Joe Mansingale and wife were out in the field on the mountain at work, when they were thrown into consternation by an unearthly noise they never heard before and never want to hear again. It was an awful roaring in the heavens above like the approach of a mighty storm; but the sky was clear and not a sign of a cloud could be seen. It grew more distinct and terrible as it drew nearer, until the sound was mingled with a hissing, buzzing noise, accompanied by rapid, sharp reports like blasting or cannonading, which was heard many miles around.

It was a strange phenomenon, a marvelous performance going on in mid air, and when a piece of meteor came whirling whizzing uncomfortably near them and passed through the branches of a tree into the ground, they did not stay to make investigation, but ran for dear life, leaving the strange, mad thing behind to cool off at leisure.

Next morning early the man returned to the scene of the transaction and found buried in the dry, rocky earth about a foot deep, a piece of aerolite, which was brought to the Courier office last week by Mr. E. A. Cook, of Rich Mountain, who heard the passage of the phenomenon and gave us the above account, assuring us that dozens of people in that region would corroborate the story. A fellow from South Carolina, near the State line, reported that it passed on toward Hogback mountain.

Curiously seekers can find this interesting specimen on exhibition at the Courier office and are at liberty to inspect it.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY.

JUST ABOUT BEDTIME.

Take a Little Early Riser—it will cure constipation, biliousness and liver troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are different from other pills. They do not gripe and break down the mucous membrane of the stomach, liver and bowels, but cure by gently arousing the secretions and giving strength to these organs. Sold by E. T. Whitehead & Co.

The foundation of self-respect is work. Work is the parent of enterprise; idleness is the parent of vice.

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH.

When the stomach is overloaded; when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causing the glands to secrete mucus, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called catarrh of the stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrh of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure.—J. R. Rhea, Coppell, Tex. Sold by E. T. Whitehead & Co.

It is by presence of mind in untried emergencies that the native metal of a man is tested.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle, and a cure is certain. For sale by E. T. Whitehead & Co., Scotland Neck, and Leggett's Drug Store, Hoboken.

It is generally understood that a man dislikes a slippery pavement when he is down on it.

FOR OVER SIXTY YEARS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for sixty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhoea. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Sold by Druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other.

It is up to the opera singer who needs a change of air to break into the church choir.

THE FOUNDATION OF HEALTH.

Nourishment is the foundation of health—life—strength. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the one great medicine that enables the stomach and digestive organs to digest, assimilate and transform all foods into the kind of blood that nourishes the nerves and feeds the tissues. Nature does the rest. Endicott's, Dyspepsia, and all diseases of the stomach and digestive organs are cured by the use of Kodol.

Problems Facing the Farmer.

Clinton Democrat.

A tangle of problems faces the farmer from season to season and day to day. What must I raise to feed my stock? What stock are best for my land? What stock must I raise to feed on what I raise? Will the spring be late or will it be early? Will the season be wet or will it be dry? What is the market outlook? What crops are best suited to my soil? What crops and what varieties of crops are suited to our climate? What rotation of crops must I follow?

These are only a few of the problems that the farmer must solve or guess at. For this he needs all the help that he can get. He needs to know what lack other farmers have had with the crop that he is minded to try. He needs all the light that he can get on the conditions that favor success with each and every food plant that grows. It is a very old, very true and generally received saying, that "experience is the best teacher." But many farmers seem to think that each man's own personal experience is best, which, in many cases, is very limited. For it takes a long time for most people to acquire a varied and valuable experience. We need the experience of others as well as our own. The successful farmer compares notes with others, and is not above asking them questions about their methods of practice, or seeking their advice in perplexing cases. He needs, too, to read and study and think, and to keep himself well posted in the progress of farming. Agriculture is no longer a simple affair. It is becoming more and more a complicated business. Science as well as capital, brains as well as muscle, intelligence as well as industry, are invested in farming as they never were before; and in order to keep pace with its progress the farmer must inform himself, and realize that he needs not only his own but others' experience, and that he must lose no time in gaining it, whether from men or from books.
